

Celebrities Abound at Macy's Cocktail Reception To Benefit New York Therapeutic Riding Center

Macy's Herald Square recently hosted a cocktail reception to support the establishment of the New York Therapeutic Riding Center, the first therapeutic horseback riding center for people with disabilities in New York City. The cocktail reception was hosted by celebrities from the equestrian and entertainment worlds including Monty Roberts (The Man Who Listens to Horses) Margie Goldstein-Engle, Lendon Gray, Anne Kursinski, George Morris, Patricia Neal, Michael Page, Sam Savitt and William Steinkraus.

Christopher and Dana Reeve and Mary Tyler Moore are on the Advisory Board of the New York

Therapeutic Riding Center and Governor George E. Pataki has issued a Proclamation in support of the Center.

The New York Therapeutic Riding Center and its new therapeutic riding program EquestriaSM will serve children and adults with disabilities living in the five boroughs of New York City, and patients referred by major hospitals and rehabilitation agencies. Dr. Leon Root of the Hospital for Special Surgery is the Medical Advisor.

George Morris and Mark Leeds of New York City Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities.

Lisa Ann Mangano, American Quarter Horse Congress Queen, and Richard Brodie President of New York Therapeutic Riding Center.

Michael Page reading Christopher Reeve's Letter of support for the New York Therapeutic Riding Center.

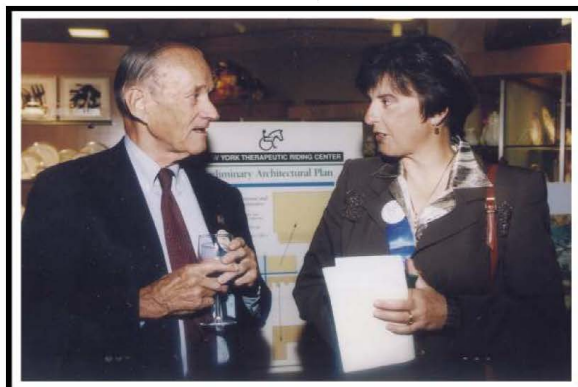

Monty and Pat Roberts.

Artist Sam Savitt with guest

William Steinkraus and Lendon Gray

Photos by Cindy Warwick

William Steinkraus and Margie Goldstein-Engle